

AY2024 Designated Year

- (1) Students shall, in principle, take courses in the designated semester.
- (2) Students in the upper years can take courses assigned to lower years. As a general rule, for courses that are not permitted except for the assigned year, refer to the course list below.

Designated to first-year students

基礎文献講読*1, 法学基礎演習, First-Year Seminar, 政治学基礎演習, 公務基礎演習, 法政ゲートウェイ講義,

情報処理入門*2

※The names of course designated to first-year students are in Japanese.

※For your reference, English translations of the course names listed above as “Designated to first-year students” are provided below.

Basic Readings*1, Introductory Seminar on Law, First-Year Seminar, Introductory Seminar on Political Science, Gateway to Law and Politics, Information Processing Methods*2

*1 You may register for 基礎文献講読 in the second year if you took a leave of absence in the spring semester of the first year.

For the procedure, refer to R Guide, “Cancellation of Registration and Application for Registration for Basic Readings.”

*2 If you are a second year student or above enrolled in the Teacher Training Course and have not completed the subjects (Operation of information equipment) stipulated in Article 66-6 of the Educational Personnel Certification Law and the Teacher’s License Law, you can follow a separate procedure.

For details on the procedure, refer to the course registration section of R Guide, “Information Processing Methods (for enrollees of Teacher Training Course and in second year or higher).”

Designated to second-year students

キャリア意識の形成

※The name of the course designated to second-year students is in Japanese.

※For your reference, the English translation of the course name is “Career Planning Formation.”

- (3) Students in the lower years are not allowed to take courses designated for upper years (or semesters). However, this does not apply to courses with certain eligibility requirements.
 - * Note: Some courses have prerequisites in addition to the designated semester to determine eligibility.
 - * Rules for taking courses that apply to students who have taken a leave of absence. The year of students who have taken a leave of absence advances automatically until the fourth year regardless of the number of semesters enrolled. In these cases, students are allowed to take courses assigned to the year (or semester) they have advanced to, unless the college/department/program determines otherwise.